Leading Men of Honolulu Take Part In Important Event In History of Communication

GOVERNOR PINKHAM TO PRESIDENT WILSON.

"With time and distance annihilated and space subdued, through wireless triumphs and impulse, the Territory of Hawaii conveys its greetings, profound respect and sympathy to Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, as he so earnestly seeks the blessings of peace and good will for all men and all nations."

cial circles, the million dollar plant of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America at Kahuku was formally started up yesterday at ten minmally started up yesterday at ten minmally started up yesterday at ten minutes after twelve, Governor Pinkham pressing a telegraph key that closed an electric circuit and set the wheels

Within a few seconds of the opening of the plant for business the shrill whine of the great apparatus rose to higher pitch and the great aerials began pulsing out a message from the Governor in the open air luncheon hall at Kahnku to the President of the United States in the White House, Washington, This was followed by a color of the recrenerce and others.

First Massage Received The great plant had been in working arder some twenty minutes before the first message rame from San Francisco, this being a greeting to Hawaii from Charles C. Moore, president of the Pan-Pacific Exposition, and on the heels of this message came one from A. P. Taythe promotion committee represen tative at San Francisco, congratulating Hawaii on the final accomplishment of another link between the Islands and Interspersed with these message were read a large number of other "wireless' despatches, addressed to some those present and dealing unsparingly with the foibles of the addressees. These latter messages furnished the Largest In the World With very few exceptions, the great plant at Kabuku, which is literally the largest wireless station in the world, was an absolute revelation to the guests of Engineer-in-Chief Slaughter of the Marconi Company and of the chamber of commerce, under whose auspices the formal opening of the plant was held. The huge concrete power-house, with its bewildering mass of machinery, its huge coils, its hundreds of rates for certain classes of messages, mysterious glass tanks, its "spack Among the other complimentary messroom," in which a few of the venture-sages sent, following the formal opensome stepped with ears carefull' stopped with finger tips, and its gleam-ing red "Danger" signs on the walls, was an eve-opener. The very substan-tial boarding house, two stories of concrete, the administration building and the other concrete structures, set down amid great towering steel masts, cov-ering the country for a mile, with wires, wires, wires running in every direction, all were as impressive as they were surprising, and this surprise was multiplied when it was explained that the Kahuku station was only half of the plant ready for operation by the company on Oahu.

By Special Train

The run down to Kahnku was made by special train, which left the city at nine o'clock. At Haleiwa the exenraionista were joined by some thirty or forty who had motored that far and who decided to go the rest of the way Kabuku the train pulled directly into the Murconi grounds, where the visit-ors were greeted by N. H. Slaughter, the resident engineer, and the luspection of the plant began at once.

Governor Pressed the F v At noon the party sat do in an improvised ontdoor dining room, roofed with corrugated iron against the weather and bright within with many American flags. The head table had a telegraph key in the center, before which Governor Pinkham was seated. George R. Carter officiated, and called upon the Governor ta press the key and start at work Hawaii's newset system of transpacific communication. This the Governor did, and the whistles of the Governor did, and the whistles of the powerhouse acknowledged his act. Then came the sending and receiving of mersages, the making of congratulatory speeches and the giving of cheera for the President, for Signor Marconi and for Engineer Slaughter.

Hawsii Led the Way

The first speaker, Lorrin A. Thurs ton, dealt with "The History of Com-munication in Hawnii," briefly outlining the history of the calle, the telephone and the wireless as Hawaii knows them. His text was, "All things come

In the presence of some two hundred of the leading citizens of Honolula, including Governor Pinkham, Major General Carter, Rear-Admiral Moore, Brigadier General Edwards, George R. The Or, ernor's Address

Governor Pinkham made a short telling address, saying in part:

"The Territory of Hawaii, for its size, occupies a large space in the attention of the world, and can not help it. Our efforts will be now to enlarge the respect and the wonder in which we are held by the commercial and the social world. We do more with our secre of other messages, to the secre-tary of the interior, the secretaries of war and the navy, the Governor of California, the mayor of San Francisco, the Associated Press, chambers of com-which emphasizes our conditions. We have brave men ing in the mid-Pacific, may be spared with us, men who would not hesitate to sacrifice themselves in our defense, but we would rather meet them as we do now than in blood and war. "Today's increased means of comunication and intelligence can easily for others to come and share the pleasures of these Islands, where they will be in easy communication at moderate expense with their friends anywhere.'

Rate Reductions W. P. S. Hawk, who is the city manager of the company, in charge of the traffic end of the business, then an-nounced the rates to be charged by the new company, these creating a good deal of satisfaction, as they show a marked reduction over all existing with world affairs."

Today marks a new era in transpa cific and world-communication for the people of Hawaii. With the opening of two great wireless stations on Oahu by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, Uncle Sam's mid-pacific territory is brought closer and is bound closer than ever to her sister commonwealths of the mainland. Day and night, through the medium of the wireless, Hawaii is in continuous touch with the mainland stations of the Marconi company, and the completion and opening of the local plants mark also the forging of a new link in a chain of Marconi stations soon to extend around the world. "A great achievement in transpacific telegraphy is accomplished with the opening of the Marconi stations, and the Star-Bulletin, on behalf of the peo-ple of Hawali, through the Associated Press, congratulates the people of Cali-fornia and the coast states that a new bond of friendship is made possible by
